MBA – Tuition Increases

Consideration Factors:

- The mix of students in our full-time MBA program is 74% those who specialize (Finance, Entrepreneurship, Sustainability or Sports Business) and 26% who are getting a general MBA.
- Those in the specializations pay a required seminar fee (for three to six terms depending on the specialization) of $650 per term ($1,950/year). The seminar fees support experiential programming and trips.
- Only students paying that seminar fee can participate in experiential trips.
- Trip fees, in most cases, are also charged on top of the seminar fee.
- In addition to our full-time students, we have accelerated students who finish the program in typically 12-months, and FLEX students who take one or two courses at a time over a longer period.
- In meetings with our MBA student group, MBASA, we have received many requests to open up experiential trips and other student programming to all students – not just our full-time two-year students.
- This change would apply to incoming student only, and does not impact current full-time students entering into their second year of the program.
- This proposal guarantees tuition for the two-years of the program to full-time students.
- This proposal eliminates the seminar fee and open up trips to all students. Trip fees are only applied when the student chooses to participate in the trip.
